

This Week: Five Events You Need to Know (June 1)

Elections in India, Israel, Australia and Europe—and more

-
- 05-06-2019

Here are five of the most important news stories this week, as well as relevant links to the full articles and videos here on theTrumpet.com.

Largest Election in History Means India Will Turn Further Toward Russia

More than 600 million Indians cast a ballot in the largest democratic exercise in human history when they voted at over 1 million polling stations in megacities, on islands and in remote mountainside villages.

Official data from the Election Commission published on May 24 showed that incumbent Indian Prime Minister Narendra Modi's Bharatiya Janata Party won 303 of the lower house's 542 seats. This exceeds the 282 seats the party won when Modi first came to power in 2014, and empowers him to better pursue his nationalist goals inside and outside of India.

Modi has also built a reputation for deftly walking the tightrope between Russia and the United States. But there are indications that this balancing act could soon be replaced with closer alignment with Russia. It's a prophetic development.

Israel Is Falling Into Lethal Political Dysfunction

On May 29, the Knesset agreed to conduct a national election on September 17—Israel's second in less than six months. The election is necessary because, for the first time in Israel's history, a prime minister-designate failed to form a coalition government.

Like America and Britain, the Jewish nation is in an unprecedented state of political chaos. The Bible has much to say about where it will lead to.

Australian Elections: A Change in Direction

The Australian Liberal-National coalition defied opinion polls when it won recent federal elections, clearing the way for Prime Minister Scott Morrison to remain in office.

Observers have drawn a comparison between Mr. Morrison's unexpected victory and Brexit, and others have compared it to the 2016 election of United States President Donald Trump—three cases in which preelection opinion polls utterly failed to accurately gauge reality.

"We've seen this play out before," Trumpet executive editor Stephen Flurry said in his May 20 Trumpet Daily Radio Show episode. The radical left is "so far to the left—the commentators, the pollsters—[that] they ... draw up the question the way that it will ensure the result they want."

However, just as in America, it appears that the radical left has been slowed down temporarily. This is not only about a polling failure; it points to God's miraculous intervention. "There is a clear change of direction," said Mr. Flurry. "God is behind it, particularly for the United States. But I think you see it also for Britain, and now Australia as well."

Learn more by reading "Australian Elections: A Change in Direction" and Trumpet editor in chief Gerald Flurry's article "Saving America From the Radical Left—Temporarily."

European Election: A Plague on Both Your Houses

Last weekend, voters from 28 nations turned out to choose their representatives for the European Parliament.

In Britain, Nigel Farage's Brexit Party won 32 percent of the vote. In France, Marine Le Pen's far-right National Rally beat the more mainstream party of President Emmanuel Macron. In Italy, the far right won by a landslide. Matteo Salvini's Lega party won 34.3 percent of the vote, a massive boost. Their coalition partner, the upstart left-wing Five Star Movement, won 17.1 percent. In Hungary, Viktor Orbán's Fidesz won 52.3 percent of the vote. In Poland, the right-wing Law and Justice party won 45.4 percent of the vote. Germany's far-right Alternative für Deutschland received 11 percent of the vote nationwide, and the far-left Greens received over 20 percent of the vote across the country.

Europeans want somebody new, somebody who approaches politics in a different way. Some are turning to environmentalist parties. Some are turning to the fringe right. But they are definitely turning away from the mainstream parties that have been ruling for decades.

A revolution in European politics is one of the key prophetic trends the Trumpet has been watching.

Secretive Bilderberg Group Talks Brexit, the Future of Europe

A secretive group of some of the world's top politicians, bankers and businessmen met this week for its 67th annual conference.

According to a press release, topics for discussion include climate change, the future of capitalism, the weaponization of social media, the importance of space, the development of artificial intelligence, the danger of cyberthreats, China, Russia, Brexit, and the future of Europe.

Since its inaugural meeting in May 1954, the Bilderberg Group has been an annual forum for elites from Europe and North America to discuss important issues away from the eyes and ears of the press.

"[T]his group is not a tight-knit group of conspirators setting out to destroy nations," explained Rodney Atkinson in a 2001 interview with Trumpet editor in chief Gerald Flurry and late Trumpet columnist Ron Fraser. "They're the kind of people selected on the basis that they might say yes to international supernational corporatism, which is the foundation, of course, of the modern European Union ...." ■